Dear Representatives Napolitano and Gibson:

The undersigned national organizations are writing to express our strong support for the Mental Health in Schools Act (H.R. 1211). We share your vision of making comprehensive school-based mental health services for students available in communities across America.

As you well know, addressing mental health early on in life is important. According to the 2009 Institute of Medicine report on mental health prevention and promotion, 50 percent of individuals with a diagnosable mental health disorder will receive a diagnosis by age 14, 75 percent by age of 24, and most will begin experiencing symptoms years before that. Given these facts, programs that better connect health and education systems should be prioritized. The earlier we act, the more effectively we can mitigate or prevent the development of a mental disorder.

The Mental Health in Schools Act (H.R. 1211) would advance a public health approach to mental health services both in schools and in the community, and has the potential to improve the quality of life for countless children while saving an estimated $247 billion annually by investing in early intervention programs. The legislation builds on a highly-effective program known as the Safe Schools/Healthy Students program, which strengthens partnerships between local education and community programs including, but not limited to, local primary health, juvenile justice and child welfare entities, and provides funding to place on-site licensed mental health professionals in schools across the country to provide behavioral health services for students and their families at no charge.

The legislation would also provide assistance to communities in order to create comprehensive, evidence-based, age and culture appropriate, trauma-informed services that incorporate strategies of positive behavioral interventions and supports. Literature summarizing studies of school-wide positive behavioral supports (PBS) suggests that, on average, PBS schools see improvements in social climate and academic performance and experience 20- to 60-percent reductions in disciplinary incidents.

Mental health issues are preventable and treatable when children, youth and their families are able to obtain appropriate services and support. The Mental Health in the Schools Act is a testament to this recognition and we are confident this legislation will help improve children's resilience and ability to succeed in life.

We look forward to working with you and your colleagues to pass this important legislation as soon as possible.
